INTRODUCTION

The records that make up this collection have been brought together and deposited at Hertfordshire Archives and Local Studies by the 398th Bomb Group Memorial Association in pursuit of the Association's mission to preserve and promulgate the memory of the combat history of the 398th Bomb Group (Heavy).

The records have been actively obtained or passed or gifted to the 398th Bomb Group Memorial Association from a variety of sources, including the United States National Archive, veterans of the 398th Bomb Group and their families and those with a general interest in the history of the 398th Bomb Group or in some part of the Group's experiences. The resulting collection provides a broad picture of the 398th Bomb Group's history, not only as officially recorded, but as personally experienced. A variety of more general military historical material in the collection sets a wider context for the specific 398th Bomb Group records.

No attempt has been made (even where that is possible) to distinguish in this catalogue which records were received by the Memorial Association from which different persons. There have been many contributors. However, it is worth remarking the substantial body of papers accumulated by Vic Jenkins of the Nuthampstead Airfield Research Society which have been passed to the Association by his widow, Yvonne and those collected by Malcolm Osborn which are now included in this collection. Generally these cover similar ground to the records collected by the 398th Bomb Group Memorial Association through Vic Jenkins' interest in the history of the Group and own contact with Group veterans, but they add notably to information on early visits of Group veterans to Nuthampstead in the 1970s and early commemorative projects and to the history of Nuthampstead Airfield and of other military units which served there. They also include three boxes of slides (with which Vic Jenkins illustrated his talks on Nuthampstead Airfield and the 398th Bomb Group), various photographs and other peripheral material on aircraft crashes in Hertfordshire.

[The 398th Bomb Group (Heavy) was part of the United States Eighth Air Force during World War II. Activated on 1 Mar 1943, after a period as a Replacement Training Unit in the United States, the 398th Bomb Group moved to England and was stationed at United States Air Force Station 131 at Nuthampstead, Hertfordshire from April 1944 until May/June 1945. The Group comprised Group Headquarters and four Squadrons (600th, 601st, 602nd and 603rd). Trained to fly B-17 Bombers (known as “Flying Fortresses”) the Group completed 195 operations flying from Nuthampstead, mainly attacking strategic targets in Germany such as oil refineries, factories, marshalling yards and aircraft plants. The last combat mission was to Pilsen, Czechoslovakia on 25 Apr 1945. After returning to America, the Group was inactivated on 1 Sep 1945]

398th BOMB GROUP MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION

[The 398th Bomb Group Memorial Association originated in 1976 when 30 members met together for the first time at Dayton, Ohio, USA, under the umbrella of the 8th (US) Air Force Historical Society. The mission of the Society is to ensure the survival of the combat history of the 398th Bomb Group (by such means as the erection of various memorials, preservation and collection of relevant records and publication of newsletters and a web-site) and to facilitate meetings of the Bomb Group veterans. An associated UK Friends of the 398th Bomb Group emerged relatively informally over a number of years, the formation of an official Group with constitution and officers finally taking place in 1987. The involvement of Vic Jenkins and Malcolm Osborn of the Nuthampstead Airfield Research Society was notable in forging strong links between the two groups]
